

THE NEW LOCAL LIQUORS • WARREN MILLER THE GODFATHER OF SKI FILMS

Seattle's Met

REASONS
To

Love
Winter

DECEMBER 2011 • SEATTLEMET.COM

$4.99

SeattleMet

Reasons to LOVE Winter IN SEATTLE

Don't hibernate. There are hot toddies, Russian spas, and skating rinks worth braving the cold.

By Allison Williams Illustrations by Brett Affrunti & Lettering by Friends of Type

The Sorrento Hotel Fireside Room

We Can Roast While We Get Toasted All Over Town

Fireside Room

The Sorrento Hotel bar is classy, not stuffy, despite the wood-paneled walls that surround the fireplace. The hunting-club vibe makes it the ideal spot for scotch. hotelsorrento.com

22

It can be difficult to snag a spot on the fireside leather couch at the Capitol Hill lounge, but the rotating art shows and occasional musical acts make up for the crowds. 22seattle.com

Shelter Lounge

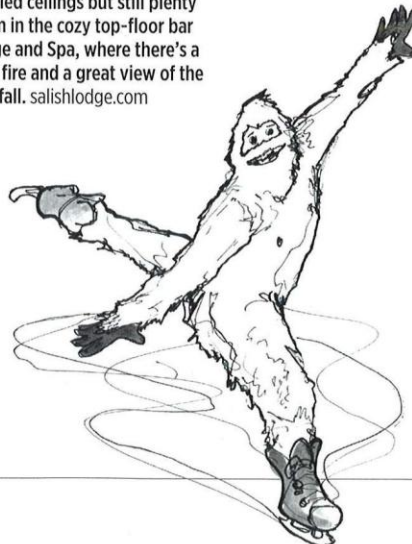

A tiled counter and bench seating flank the flaming fire table in the airy, angular Ballard bar. theshelterlounge.com

Locöl Barley and Vine

It's the first full winter for West Seattle's wine-heavy hangout, where local art hangs on the walls and West Seattleites curl up hearthside to wait for a table. locolseattle.com

The Attic

There are angled ceilings but still plenty of elbow room in the cozy top-floor bar at Salish Lodge and Spa, where there's a roaring wood fire and a great view of the roaring waterfall. salishlodge.com

16

We can ice-skate outdoors—even when it's raining—at the covered Capitol Hill Ice Rink in Cal Anderson Park.

capitolhillicerink.com

17

Forget neighborhood competitions—our best holiday light displays are in the mobile, month-long Christmas Ship Festival.

argosycruises.com/themecruises/xmasschedule.cfm

